Love the video of dogs dining out. :) (And I have to wonder--how did they keep the yellow Lab from scarfing the whole bowl at once? My Lab wouldn't have hesitated for a second.)

Have you seen any of William Wegman's videos? He made a bunch of them for Sesame Street, like this bread-making demo, and a longer film featuring the Hardly Boys ("They're not boys; they're girls and dogs.") solving a mystery at Rangeley Lake. (Excerpts here on YouTube.) The Weims are good actors. :)

Fantastic video - and I was wondering just the same. Such well trained dogs. :d

Yes, loved the dogs dining. I was waiting for the moment when the dogs put down their eating utensils and dove in, but such mannerly dogs--I've seen humans far less neat in their table habits. (Says the person who, in chomping down a burger, squirted herself with pickle juice and mustard three days ago.)

Of course I’m still taking my frustrations out reading gardening catalogues. Yes, a 100-foot magnolia campbellii would be terrific. Where am I going to put it?^

Sigh. I just went through a course of Beverley Nichols' books, and have a strange desire to dig up my yard.
